

Short bio

Short bio

Ferdinand von Mengden is professor of English Historical Linguistics at Freie Universität Berlin. His PhD on Old English cardinal numerals both from a historical and typological perspective was published in 2010 as a monograph. His main research fields comprise (theories of) language change, sociolinguistics (particularly linguistic diversity in urban spaces) and the history of linguistics. Currently he works on a monograph on Emergent Grammar in which he combines these areas and argues for a dynamic, non-essentialist view on human language.